

Alcidion and Novari Health Forge Strategic Partnership to Advance Patient Flow Management

MELBOURNE, AUS & KINGSTON, CAN – Alcidion Group Limited (ASX: ALC), a leading provider of FHIR-native patient flow solutions for healthcare, and Novari Health, a market leader in waitlist management and referral management technologies, have joined forces to offer a comprehensive approach to patient journey management.

Effective management of a patient's journey requires a systemwide approach, from specialist referrals to inpatient admissions through to discharge. Key to this improvement is making data easily accessible and mobile, engaging clinicians, and predicting bottlenecks in the system.

The strategic partnership between Alcidion and Novari enhances the opportunity for our customers to liberate data, drive operational efficiencies, and reduce waiting times across the care continuum.

The Novari Access to Care Platform™ includes a series of integrated software modules providing surgical wait list management, referral management, central intake, and care coordination. Health systems, hospitals, regional health authorities, and governments leverage its cloud-based technologies to drive down wait times and ensure that the right patients get treated at the right time and by the right provider.

In acute care settings, Alcidion's electronic patient journey boards present real-time information, creating a comprehensive view of patient, ward, site, and health service capacity and demand.

Together, Novari and Alcidion offer a rich blend of technology and expertise that supports the efficient and effective delivery of care and improvements to patient safety. This partnership is driven by a shared commitment to addressing the critical challenges healthcare systems face in managing patient flow and patient access to care. Inefficient processes, administrative bottlenecks, and fragmented data often lead to delayed care, frustrated patients, and strained resources.

"At Alcidion, our commitment has always been to enhance hospital operations, and our collaboration with Novari allows us to amplify our impact throughout the entire patient experience." – Kate Quirke, Alcidion CEO

"The combined Alcidion and Novari capabilities address common challenges experienced by healthcare systems in Australia, Canada, New Zealand, United Kingdom, and beyond. Together, we can help our clients to deliver efficient and timely patient care." – John Sinclair, CPHIMS, President & CEO, Novari Health

As the partnership continues to evolve, Alcidion and Novari Health remain dedicated to advancing patient-centred care, fostering innovation, and contributing to the ongoing improvement of healthcare systems globally.
